This season's best in show for winter coats

With the onset of cooler months, it's time to look at this season's latest dog coats. Instead of just looking towards a fashion forecast, we highlight some of the more interesting coats—from high tech to warm and cosy to water repellent.

Lighted Labcoat will make your dog stand out

Direct from the US comes Ruffwear's innovative illuminating, high-visibility, Glow-in-the-Park™ technology (1000 ft./300 m visibility).

Whether in rural or urban settings, your dog will have added visibility with contrasting colours and reflective trim. We know that reflective coats aren't anything new but this technological coat uses a compact battery-pack to illuminate bright blue flexible wires running along the sides. This keeps your pooch pal in sight—even in conditions where reflective materials can't be seen.

- High-visibility 3M™ Scotchlite™ reflective trim
- Adjustable straps for a precise fit
- Durable, water-resistant, ripstop nylon shell
- Breathable, comfort mesh liner keeps coat in place
- Two standard AAA batteries power the light for more than 20 hours of use in the on mode and 50 hours in the flashing mode—batteries included!

On a nasty day, curl up under a Didgeridoona

Natural pure cotton japara has been given the oilskin treatment for this practical, hardwearing and water repellent coat. Proudly made here in Australia, these fully washable coats come in two styles and three sizes. For cooler conditions you can choose the tartan wool lined coat or the lighter cotton version. The Queensland based manufacturers also have an oilskin and wool wash that re-oils the oilskin, leaving it smelling fresh and retaining the water-repellent qualities.

Sparkle in this durable faux suede jacket

These cute jackets are lightweight, machine washable and have a contrasting collar. Easy Velcro® belly and chest straps make this an easy jacket to put on as you're whisking out the door. Genuine Swarovski® crystal heart design adds sparkle and panache to this classy coat.

Chase balls in all weather wearing the Cloud Chaser

Rain, sleet and snow won't slow your pup down when the weather is inclement. The Cloud Chaser is a breathable, waterproof, windproof and insulating jacket that is designed to fit snugly against the body to trap core body heat. 4-way Lycra® stretch panels allow for an ergonomic fit and a wide range of motion on the most active dog. Has side locking zipper for easy fit and features reflective strips for added visibility.
